

A Fast Ride

Two individuals took a thrilling ride down Deer Creek Dam's spillway last week in a raft. Fortunately, the men were unharmed. Each received a citation from state park rangers. A Provo River Water Association worker said he tried to stop the men but they didn't listen to him.

As a postlude to the national panel, KUED will broadcast a local Civic Dialogue follow-up special at 9:00 p.m. Host Ted Capener will talk with Utahns about their reaction to the presidential conversation. Among the local panelists are Ronald Coleman, Associate Vice President for Diversity and Faculty Development for the University of Utah; and Abby Trujillo Maestas of the Centro de la Familia.

Nationally and locally, citizens are calling for an address to racial conflicts and questions. "Racs in America and the multitude of issues involving race in this country are of tremendous importance for today and the future," says Lehrer, who is executive director of The NewsHour. "We hope that this special program will contribute in a positive way to national dialogue on the issue."

For its round-table style discussion, The NewsHour has formed a diverse group of panelists, with backgrounds, experiences, and intelligence that should inspire a thought-provoking, productive, and interesting dialogue. The panel will include:

Sherman Alexie: author and filmmaker, who wrote the screenplay for the Sundance Award-winning "Signals"; Einar fellow at The Foundation a president and United Way o from 1992-1993; James: dean of University and Secretary of Human Resources Virginia Gov Allen; Claren columnist, Tribune editor member; Rodriguez: ed Pacific News NewsHour Roger Rosenbla for Time mag The NewsHour Suro: a Washin reporter and a
